

Privacy Policy

Object of the privacy policy

This policy refers to the data encountered by visiting our website and provides information on how this data is handled. No data exchange with other companies takes place, thereby limiting this privacy policy to your visit to our website.

Personal data and its usage

You need a customer account in order to contribute to the chat or blog. This account includes personal information, such as name, address and email address. This data is stored in our database during login for subsequent processing.

Data transfer

The data that we collect from you will not be disclosed to third parties. Since all shipments are made directly from us, there is no need to pass on your personal data.

Cookies

There are repeatedly uncertainties due to the cookies that are stored on the visitor's computer. But these small files are used for the storage of information. They do not produce viruses, the computer will not be attacked and you will not be tracked down.

Editing and deletion of data

You always have the right to correct your personal data registered in your customer account. Having your most current information, such as your address, is very important to us. Within the account, you can also specify whether or not you wish to receive a newsletter and/or information about special offers.

This decision may be revoked at any time.

Privacy policy

As already stated, personal data will not be disclosed. To ensure data security, your account is password-protected, restricting strangers from gaining access to the account and the respective data.

Changes to this data privacy statement

The website operator reserves the right to make changes to this privacy policy. In this case, you will be informed via email and receive all relevant information regarding your customer account.